The Outlook wasn't brilliant for the Mudville nine that day: The score stood four to two, with but one inning more to play. Recommended for ages 5+ and families "Two of my loves - baseball and classical music - united at last. Close by the sturdy batsman the ball unheeded sped- "That ain't my style," said Casey. San Francisco: The San Francisco Examiner. Christopher Bing's magnificent version of this immortal ballad of the flailing 19th-century baseball star is rendered as though it had been newly discovered in a hundred-year-old scrapbook. And when, responding to the cheers, he lightly doffed his hat, No stranger in the crowd could doubt 'twas Casey at the bat. And now the pitcher holds the ball, and now he lets it go, And now the air is shattered by the force of Casey's blow. The San Francisco Examiner. "Strike one," the umpire said. From the benches, black with people, there went up a muffled roar, Like the beating of the storm-waves on a stern and distant shore; "Kill him! Kill the umpire!" shouted some one in the stand. Its author would rather have seen it forgotten. Bing seamlessly weaves real and trompe l'oeil reproductions of artifacts-period baseball cards, tickets, advertisements, and a host of other memorabilia into the narrative to present a rich and multifaceted panorama of a bygone era. Steinbrenner III, New York Yankees The activity booklet contains the complete Ernest Lawrence Thayer poem, amazing facts about baseball, sheet music, games and puzzles. The rest Clung to that hope which springs eternal in the human breast; They thought, if only Casey could get but a whack at that - We'd put up even money, now, with Casey at the bat. But Flynn preceded Casey, as did also Jimmy Blake. And the former was a lulu and the latter was a cake, So upon that stricken multitude grim melancholy sat, For there seemed but little chance of Casey's getting to the bat. Then from 5,000 throats and more there rose a lusty yell; It rumbled through the valley, it rattled in the dell; It knocked upon the mountain and recoiled upon the flat, For Casey, mighty Casey, was advancing to the bat. "Kill him! Kill the umpire!" shouted someone on the stand; And it's likely they'd a-killed him had not Casey raised his hand. Instead, Ernest Thayer's poem has taken a well-deserved place as an enduring icon of Americana. Loading PreviewSorry, preview is currently unavailable. Thank you very much for your cooperation. But Flynn let drive a single, to the wonderment of all, And Blake, the much despised, tore the cover off the ball; And when the dust had lifted, and the men saw what had occurred, There was Jimmy safe at second and Flynn a-hugging third. Plenty of extra tracks make this CD/MP3 a must have for baseball and music fans of all ages. A book to be pored over by children, treasured by aficionados of the sport and given as a gift to all ages: a tragi-comic celebration of heroism and of a golden era of sport. "Strike one," the umpire said. And it's likely they'd have killed him had not Casey raised his hand. With a smile of Christian charity great Casey's visage shone; He stilled the rising tumult; he bade the game go on; He signaled to the pitcher, and once more the spheroid flew, But Casey still ignored it; and the umpire said, "Strike two." "Fraud!" cried the maddened thousands, and the echo answered, "Fraud!" But the scornful look from Casey, and the audience was awed; They saw his face grow stern and cold, they saw his muscles strain, And they knew that Casey wouldn't let that ball go by again. The sneer is gone from Casey's lip, his teeth are clenched with hate; He pounds with cruel violence his bat upon the plate; And now the pitcher holds the ball, and now he lets it go, And now the air is shattered by the force of Casey's blow. Oh, somewhere in this favoured land the sun is shining bright, The band is playing somewhere, and somewhere hearts are light, And somewhere men are laughing, and somewhere children shout, But there is no joy in Mudville—mighty Casey has struck out. Orchestra members double as the cheering crowds and vendors hawking their wares, complete with the sounds of the ball being hit. Ten thousand eyes were on him as he rubbed his hands with dirt; Five thousand tongues applauded when he wiped them on his shirt. Those lines have echoed through the decades, the final stanza of a poem published pseudonymously in the June 3, 1888, issue of the San Francisco Examiner. And then when Cooney died at first, and Barrows did the same, A sickly silence fell upon the patrons of the game. L. And now the leather-covered sphere came hurtling through the air, And Casey stood a-watching it in haughty grandeur there. There was ease in Casey's manner as he stepped into his place; There was pride in Casey's bearing and a smile on Casey's face. You can download the paper by clicking the button above.
